

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The authors would like to thank the following people for assisting with this report.

: David Rees for his invaluable technical advice and his support in the field

: Michael Austin and Martin Bluml for this assistance in the field.

: Keith Reynard, who, as well as assisting in the field, patiently entered the information into the GIS.

Special thanks to the Shire of Romsey staff for their support; especially Chris Bannon.

The advice from Bob Disken, the area catchment co-ordinator for the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, was also greatly appreciated.

Gathering of soils information would not be possible without the support of the landholders in the Shire, who provided access to their properties. The authors would like to thank those landholders and their families for allowing detailed soils information to be collected on their properties, in particular, Robert Clement, Peter Scanlon, John Clement and Daryl Maxted.

The land capability study for the Shire of Romsey was jointly funded by the Shire of Romsey, the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, and the National Landcare Program
